locations map

Filming for Wolf Hall, the six-part BBC drama adapted from Hilary Mantel's award-winning novels Wolf Hall and Bring Up the Bodies, took place at six places we look after including Barrington Court and Montacute House in Somerset.

Filming on location lent an authenticity to Wolf Hall for its producer Mark Pybus. 'The advantages of filming in a historic location are massive,' he said. 'It also helps the actors. If they're stepping into the buildings that Henry VIII and Thomas Cromwell walked around in, it helps bring a realness to the project.'

'The National Trust has been very supportive and around 40% of our overall shoots have been at Trust places,' he added. 'It will be a big part of the overall programme, the locations that people see.'

Location fees help us to continue our work caring for special places, and thanks to Wolf Hall we'll be able to carry on protecting the six sites involved in the BBC drama, for ever, for everyone.

Wolf Hall airs on BBC Two in January 2015

1 Montacute House

Montacute, Somerset, TA15 6XP

Montacute represents Greenwich Palace, Henry VIII's main London seat and the site of Anne Boleyn's arrest. The Elizabethan mansion's extensive grounds provided a spectacular backdrop to jousting sequences and hosted the dazzling Royal Tent. Montacute has previously been used for filming for The Libertine and Sense and Sensibility.

'Montacute is fantastic, it's probably the most beautiful house we're filming in... It has superb architecture.'
David Johnson – Location Manager

2 Barrington Court

Barrington, Somerset, TA19 0NQ

Free from collections and furniture, the spacious interiors of Barrington Court were dressed for Wolf Hall as York Place (later Whitehall), the home of Cromwell's mentor and friend, Cardinal Wolsey. Saved from ruin and restored by the Lyle family in the 1920s, this rambling Tudor manor house features the Long Gallery which is 40 paces long.

3 Lacock Abbey

Lacock, Wiltshire, SN15 2LG

Founded early in the 13th century by the Countess of Salisbury as a nunnery of the Augustinian order, Lacock Abbey and the surrounding village is a prime site for film and television productions including Cranford, Harry Potter and The Other Boleyn Girl. Following the dissolution of the monasteries, Henry VIII sold it to Sir William Sharington, one of his courtiers, who converted it into a house. In the drama the exteriors represent Wolf Hall, the Seymour family seat.

4 Horton Court

Gloucestershire

Horton Court features as Austin Friars, Cromwell's adult home. The 16th century manor house in the southern Cotswolds was built from the remains of a Norman hall.

Please note Horton Court is not currently open to the public.

5 Great Chalfield Manor and Garden

near Melksham, Wiltshire, SN12 8NH

The interiors of Great Chalfield Manor stood in for Thomas Cromwell's home, Austin Friars, a happy place teeming with in-laws and wards, nieces and nephews, and artists. A moated manor house built between 1465 and 1480 for Thomas Tropenell, Great Chalfield has been used to film Lark Rise to Candleford, The Other Boleyn Girl and Tess of the D'Urbervilles.

6 Chastleton House

Chastleton, Oxfordshire, GL56 0SU

Chastleton's small stone courtyard provided the location for dramatic scenes from Cromwell's miserable childhood in Putney, while the interior represented Wolf Hall itself, the place where Jane Seymour first catches Henry's eye. Built by a rich wool merchant between 1607 and 1612, the house has remained relatively unchanged for nearly 400 years.

Penshurst Place and Gardens

Kent, TN11 8DG

Built in 1341 and described as 'the most perfect example of a defended manor house', Penshurst Place regularly attracts film scouts looking for historical architecture and authentic interiors. The property was once owned by Henry VIII and has barely changed in 600 years. The Long Gallery, one of the locations used to film scenes at Whitehall, remains historically accurate to the Tudor period.

Hospital St Cross

Hampshire, SO23 9SD

The Hospital, which is England's oldest continuing almshouse, comprises a group of grade I listed medieval and Tudor buildings, including a medieval hall and tower, Tudor cloister, Norman church and gardens reflecting a seventeenth century connection with North America. In Wolf Hall the Hospital provided a number of locations including Hampton Court, Winsor Castle and Grays Inn.

Sutton House

2 and 4 Homerton High Street, Hackney, London, E9 6JQ

Sutton House in Hackney was built in 1535 by Ralph Sadler, who rose to be a prominent member of Henry VIII's court and also served Edward VI and Elizabeth I. Ralph Sadler is an important character in Wolf Hall (and its sequel Bring Up the Bodies) and is educated as a member of Cromwell's household where he meets his wife Helen Barre.

The Vyne

Basingstoke, Hampshire, RG24 9HL

Although not featured in the television series, the Vyne is mentioned in Wolf Hall during a conversation between Thomas Cromwell and Mary Tudor. Built for Lord Sandys, Henry VIII's Lord Chamberlain, Cromwell tells Mary that her father the King intends to visit Lord Sandys to see his 'handsome new gallery' which remains as Henry VIII would have seen it today.

Caerphilly Castle

South Wales, CF83 1JD

Caerphilly Castle is one of the largest and most striking moated medieval castles in the land. The walls and much of the fabric of the 13th-century tower fortress are intact, and the south-east tower leans over as if it were about to collapse. In Wolf Hall the castle was one of many locations which doubled up as the Tower of London.

Sherborne School & Town

Sherborne

Sherborne School and the surrounding area was used to portray a few different locations, most notably York Place – later known as Whitehall – where Cardinal Wolsey, Cromwell's mentor and friend, lived before his fall from grace. The school is not open to the public but its arch and cloisters are visible from the town where filming also took place.

Please note that Sherborne School is not open to the public.

Tithe Barn Bradford-on-Avon

This spectacular 14th century monastic stone barn, 51 metres (168 feet) long, with an amazing timber cruck roof doubles up as a Barn in Putney.
