A word from our Director

One are the days when our places were ‘put to bed’ for the winter; curtains drawn and treasures tucked up beneath dustsheets. Autumn is the time for welcoming people inside, for storytelling and uncovering the extraordinary stories behind the places we look after – and the people who lived and worked in them. These stories invite us to imagine ourselves in another time and in other worlds. Often they speak of experiences and issues that are universal to us all. This year, Powis Castle explores the untold story of the Welsh Girls’ School pupils who were evacuated to the castle during the Second World War. Tregedgar House is examining the role of the Morgan family during the Churchill presidency of 1839 and the campaign for political reform.

These stories open up our places and show their past in a different light – but just as importantly for me, they also highlight the relevance our places and stories have today, in 2019, for all of us in our everyday lives.

I am immensely proud of the projects that make our places living resources that play an active and valued part in their local communities. This year Tregedgar House has opened up the old laundry building after 18 months of renovations. The resulting community hub was created with and for community groups in Newport, fulfilling Tregedgar’s vision to be for people, with people, by people. This was followed by the development of the adjoining community allotment and gardens which is being created in partnership with community groups alongside our own staff and volunteers.

At Eridge, we’ve hosted a Wellbeing celebration for local primary schools, organised in partnership with Public Health Wales and six other partner organisations. This summer, 300 pupils from 10 schools enjoyed the fantastic opportunity to use the garden to enjoy the outdoors, make memories and learn how to look after their mental health to support their wellbeing.

These projects tell the wonderful stories of the people who bring our places alive today. I am proud that our places matter to people. Without your continued support and that of our local communities, our visitors, staff, volunteers and partners, this work wouldn’t be possible. These are the places you help us to look after for everyone, for ever. These are the places that make us who we are.

Justin Albert, Director for Wales

One small step for cattle ... one giant leap for the natural world!

We’re watching and waiting on news of some exciting agricultural trials in Snowdonia this autumn. At Ysbyty Ifan – our largest agricultural estate - a group of National Trust farmers has united to form Fferm Ifan, a local cooperative determined to ensure future generations can continue to live and work in the countryside by improving the way farms work.

For the first time ever they’ve introduced cattle to a lonely bog called Migneint, a precious habitat and breeding ground to the stunning hen harriers (birds of prey you might catch drifting at low levels over fields) and the stunning golden plover. If the trials are successful, the bog becomes better for nature, whilst also supporting healthy natural beef production.

The ultimate New Year walk

Who knows where it (and 2020) could take you

At this time of year we celebrate the fireworks of autumn colour, and light up Christmas with decorations and delicious treats.

And, just when you thought our places couldn’t get any more spectacular, in comes January covering our windows with frost motifs on crystal nigths, and lighting up lawns and woodlands by throwing sparkling sunlight on crunchy white leaves and deep woodlands. And you can do that while taking in spectacular coastal views or discovering hidden woodlands and spotting fallow deer in the morning dew.

Explore Wales and benefit from big skies and some splendid headspace as you resolve to make the New Year a good one. Try 80 acres of wintry wonderland at Bodnant Garden in North Wales and take in the late flowering plants releasing their perfume into crisp, frosty air. Or see Powis Castle in a whole new magical parkland (90 acres of it) at Tregedgar House. The list goes on, and the adventure of 2020 begins.

Discover the oh-so stunning walk at Dinorwic in Carnarvonshire designed by Capability Brown when he visited in 1755 (our volunteers have waterproofed the path especially for you), or visit the magical wooded valley at Colby Woodland Garden in Pembroke. Wrap up and behold crashing waves on the best beach walk to be had at Rhossili on the Gower (coastline we love and care for). Or why not drive east and see the bursts of colourful berries and icy water features at Dyffryn Gardens’ impressive 53 acre estate, or lose yourself in the majestic, magical parkland (90 acres of it) at Tredegar House. The list goes on, and the adventure of 2020 begins.

Riches and Rebellion at Tredegar House

Marking 180 years since the Newport Rising

Godfrey Road, John Frost Square, Sir Briggs Avenue, Charterist Drive – all over Newport you’ll find clues revealing just how influential the Morgans and the Chartist movement have been on the city.

But despite being major landowners at the time of the Newport Rising, the Morgan name is rarely mentioned in relation to workers’ meagre living conditions or the resulting battle.

The family of Tredegar survived Newport’s bloodiest affair unscathed.

Now, 180 years on from the last, large-scale uprising of the Chartist movement, we’re exploring themes of power, responsibility, surveillance and the curation of history.

Riches and Rebellion runs daily until 3 April, 2020.

Illustration of Chartists marching past Tredegar House published in the Times newspaper in 1839
Welcome to a feast for the senses

As the evening light begins to fade and the cooler air arrives, the garden at Powis Castle will be alive with a dazzling array of reds, yellows, burnt oranges and golds.

Explore borders brimming with shrubby salvias, sedums, asters and tall, deep blue aconites, and stand on the Great Lawn to admire maples and acers glowing in striking shades of gold, orange and yellow.

Enjoy the crisp sound of leaves crunching beneath your feet, take in the sweet aroma of ripe fruit coming from the carefully trained apple trees in the Formal Garden, and experience the mouth-watering scent of burnt sugar and caramel coming from the carefully trained apple trees and Cedrela auriculata japonicum on the lower terraces.

Meet Father Christmas and, as well as adding some festive cheer to the gardens, try some of the delicious Christmas food on offer in our restaurant or do a little Christmas shopping in the gift shop.

Dragon of Wales – all of them hidden within the castle’s treasures. One of our favourite pieces is a chest known as the Shagreen, decorated with gilded motifs of Japanese imagery and folklore and dating back to the time of Sir Thomas Myddelton I. He bought the castle in 1595, was a founder member of the East India Company, a regular at the court of Queen Elizabeth I and in 1603 was Lord Mayor of London. His treasure chest tells stories you wouldn’t believe.

14 September-3 November.

Undercover visitor?

Fancy entering Chirk Castle through a concealed and semi-secret jib door?

What about missing the grand staircase and detouring back to the butler’s pantry, the linen folding room (rooms where our own hardworking staff now reside on working day) and through to the family breakfast room? This season’s special ‘under the covers’ tour gives you a sneak peek at rooms normally closed to visitors.

Join the fun 9-24 November, weekends only, 11am-4pm (timed ticket only).

The art of the Christmas decoration

Celebrate the spirit of Edding and of Christmas past.

The stunning Christmas decorations at Edding have been inspired by and pay homage to the people (from carpenters and butlers to lady’s maids) who worked here in the past.

They’ve all been created using natural materials from Edding’s garden and 1,200 acre estate, with outstanding results. Among our favourite are the paper cutting decorations inspired by Betty Ratcliffe who was the daughter of a local clockmaker and lady’s maid to Dorothy Yorke in the 18th century. She was encouraged by the Yorkes in her artistic endeavours – painting, sketching, and paper cutting. You can see how she’s honoured along the corridors below stairs, but then explore the house and gardens to see other bold displays and beautiful details created by our wonderful team of volunteers.

30 November-31 December. Gardens and outbuildings 11am-4pm, house 11.30am-2.30pm. Times vary for decoration making. Check with property or join the garden team for their table top making workshops during the first three weekends in December.

Folklore before your eyes

Discover something brand new in the history of Chirk.

It is too easy to walk through Chirk Castle admiring the exquisite furniture while missing out completely on the stories it tells.

Our well-travelled and eclectic collections have links to a wealth of ancient stories and folklore from across the globe. In a first for the castle, we’ve created a Folklore and Furnishings trail so you can delve into the origins and meaning of the design motifs woven into the fabric of the castle’s furniture.

Walk and wonder at the story of the Lion and the Unicorn, the legendary Greek musician Orpheus, the Hare of Inaba (and the clever or not so clever trick he plays on sharks) and of course the Red Mayor of London. His treasure chest tells stories you wouldn’t believe.

Behind the Stage at Plas Newydd

Enjoy a unique opportunity to see conservation in action.

As Plas Newydd benefits from one of the largest conservation renovations we’ve seen in Wales, we are thrilled that rather than close our doors, we can open them wider and use this opportunity to showcase what has shaped this home into the iconic house on the Menai Strait.

Behind the Stage is an immersive experience designed by award-winning architects vPPR (famous for their exhibitions in venues like London’s V&A).

It invites you to step back in time and delve into the archives and house’s history. Discover what influenced the original design in the 16th century, how it was remodelled in the 18th and 19th, and how it was refurbished in the 1930s by the 6th Marquess of Anglesey. Crucially you’ll discover how specialist contractors and the house and collections team are working together to preserve and – post conservation work – replaced in exactly the same place the same room you’ve just walked through.

Until 3 November, 11am-5pm.

See the full programme of events on the website.

There’s no such thing as ‘putting the garden to bed’ at Bodnant

With 80 acres of exotic and native trees, a botanic collection of shrubs from around the world and beds bursting with year-round colour, texture, form and scent, there’s always something sensational for visitors to experience at Bodnant Garden.

Autumn is a firework display of colour around the garden then, as leaves begin to fall and fruits and berries fade, the Winter Garden moves to centre stage; bulbs start to pepper the ground, the glossy bank of trees is revealed in sparkling winter sunlight and late flowering plants begin to open and release their perfume into crisp, frosty air.

Back in the warm glow of these winter displays and spot signs of spring to come; see the first daffodils and rhododendrons in bloom – in December! Come and see our gardeners planting hiacctus for spring, pruning the Laburnum Arch, winter-tending the famous rose collection and preparing new displays for the year ahead.

In 2019 we’ve also been looking back and marking 70 years since Bodnant Garden joined the National Trust. Learn more about this legacy on our guided walks this autumn and winter.

Celebrating Calan Gaeaf at Penrhyn

Did you know that as well as being the predecessor to All Hallows Eve and Halloween, Nos Calan Gaeaf signals the night before the first day of winter in the Celtic calendar?

The festival was a time to commemorate the dead, when spirits walked the earth but also a time to celebrate the ‘cubeal’ (harvest) and prepare for colder months ahead. This autumn Penrhyn Castle will be taking this as inspiration as they take visitors on a sensory journey around the garden to look at how nature and the gardeners prepare for the cold snap.

‘But just like the old Celtic tradition, you couldn’t have Calan Gaeaf without the odd scare too! The spirits will definitely be walking the corridors of the castle this year as we look at the ‘real’ ghost stories of Penrhyn on our silhouette trail – the stories that people have told us over the years about bumps in the nights, strange sightings and spooky goings on!’
